Didsbury Jottings

By A.C.H.

We smiled when the CBC announcer referred to our town as Didsburg, on the Monday night newscast. But we didn't mind. We write like that ourself. It was thrilling to hear that another Didsbury boy had made the headlines. It was Goldwyn (Gabel). He had brought his plane home safely from a raid on Europe, though his aircraft was literally in tatters. Didsbury is building up a splendid reputation for courageous flyers and, incidentally, we heard that PO Bert Buhar had landed safely in England.

We hand a bouquet each to Mr. Charles Mortimer and Mr. J. S. McCloy. They turned over a cheque for $150.00 to the Red Cross. The proceeds from their sales of ice cream and cold drinks at the Fair last Wednesday. We wished we had known this on Friday, for we had been harbouring dark thoughts. When they handed us our drinks, we thought they might have filled it up a little fuller. Then, when we tasted it, we were glad they hadn't. It had that kind of a flavor. But later on, when we found out that all the proceeds were to go to the Red Cross, and what a grand total it was, we forgot our displeasure. Certainly the Red Cross will not be displeased when they receive the Didsbury cheque.

Also, our two heroes sold $100 worth of war savings stamps, spinning the wheel. They tell me it was the same wheel Sally Rand spun at the Calgary stampede. Yipes! And Didsbury's thanks to the Canada girls, who put in Fair day selling war savings stamps. They sold $55 worth. And no Sally Rand wheel either. But then, the girls don't need one.

Mr. Rees Hugh, Provincial Commissioner for the Boy Scout organization, attended the regular Monday night meeting of the Scouts. It was a memorable night for the boys. Mr. Hugh pointed out to the boys that all the activities of the scouts will prove of use to them later on in life. It is not just a matter of wearing badges on the sleeves. He told them that being able to tie a knot with one hand might be the means of saving their lives. Only recently several men went to their doom in the St. Lawrence, who might have saved their lives had they been able to put a rope round their waste and tie it with one hand. These men were on an ice flow that had broken loose from the main sheet of ice. They were floating down the St. Lawrence. People on a bridge who saw them coming, let down ropes for them to catch. Holding on to the ice with one hand, they caught at the ropes with the other. Had they been able to tie the rope around them they could have been hauled to safety. As it was they went on to their doom. Mr. Hugh gave other interesting examples of how scout lore could have saved lives.

The boys, who always have been a keen and enthusiastic crowd, were positively enraptured with the talk. It was a pity that some of the older boys, who are working on farms for the holidays, missed this thrilling meeting.

Mr. Hugh is taking the place of Mr. Dunlop at the bank here, while Mr. Dunlop is taking his holidays.

Obituary.

HARRY PEARSON

The sudden death of Mr. Harry Edgar Pearson, on Saturday, came as a shock to the whole community. Along with Mrs. Pearson, he went out to his farm east of town on Saturday afternoon and was engaged pulling weeds when he collapsed. Heart failure was pronounced the cause of death.

Mr. Pearson was well known not only in this district, but throughout all Alberta, having been, in addition to his farming activities, employed as a hall adjuster for the Alberta Hall Board for the past twenty years. Born at LaVale, Wisconsin, September 20, 1877, he was married to Elizabeth Moon in Chicago in 1902. They came to Alberta in 1903 and homesteaded eight miles east of Didsbury. Besides farming, he was for some time engaged as a foreman in the Forest Reserve west of Didsbury.

Moving to town in 1919 he joined the Western Mutual Insurance Co. as insurance adjuster, and was engaged in similar work up to the time of his death. He was a member of King Hiram Masonic Lodge. Besides his wife, he is survived by two sons, Edgar, of Long Beach, Cal. and Tpr. Tom, with the Calgary Tanks, overseas; and four daughters, Mrs. M. E. Wood, Didsbury, Mrs. Earl Basse, of Harvey, Illinois, Mrs. John Hiclop, Los Angeles and Mrs. M. J. Hearst, of Calgary.

Also two brothers, Edwin, of Pico, Cal., and Herbert, of Long Beach, Cal., and seventeen grandchildren. The funeral service was held at the Knox Church, and the last rites of the Masonic Lodge were conferred at the graveside. Rev. D. Whyte Smith officiated at both services.

The pallbearers, who were members of King Hiram Lodge, were A. G. Stuhler, A. Basso, A. C. Fisher, C. H. McLeod, C. Hiclop and J. K. Gooder. W. A. McFarquhar had charge of funeral arrangements.

LOUISE SHANTZ

Funeral services will be held in the Carstairs United Church today (Thursday) at 2:30, for Mrs. Louise Shantz. Interment at Carstairs cemetery. Herb Fisher in charge of arrangements. Full particulars next issue.

F. A. Marsh AB, and Mrs. Marsh (nee Bessie Ringheim) and infant son, Robert, arrived Monday to spend a two-week leave with relatives and friends in the Didsbury and Carstairs districts. Able Seaman Marsh, who has been serving with the Navy on the West Coast for over a year, and family will return to their home in Victoria, following their leave.

Mr and Mrs. Albert Schneidmiller entertained the Halers at a spring chicken dinner on Sunday, celebrating Mr. Schneidmiller's birthday. Being a man, he flaunted all twenty six candles unashamed.

Thirty two mothers are looking forward to welcoming home thirty two cadets this weekend. Or what is left of them after parading and drilling in the scorching heat, poor dears.

Still Threshing in July

This must be a record! Duncan Bell reports that he finished threshing his 1942 crop on Friday, July 22nd, 1943.

Duncan says he might have threshed in the spring, but thought it best to finish seeding. He thinks it came out very good, for after standing out all winter his wheat averaged 30 bushels to the acre, and oats 40 bushels, and that after being hailed last summer. Some wheat damaged 25% and oats up to 35%.

He says there is still some threshing to be done.

Not Disrupting Studies

Boys Attending School Not Affected By New Work Order

Extension of compulsory transfer regulations to youths 16, 17 and 18 years old will not in any way interfere with their education, Labor Department officials said.

Under the new order, announced in the House of Commons by Labor Minister Mitchell, youths of these ages who are not attending school may be required to take certain jobs, but none will be taken out of schools or colleges.

It is expected many of them will be used in relieving labor shortages in farming and cutting of fuel-wood, and to replace men transferred out of the less essential jobs.

Details of the plan for using these young workers have not been worked out, but officials said care being directed to jobs distant from their homes.

Brings Hope Back

Scottish Officer Tells How Men Are Affected By Pipers

The following thoughts from the letter of an R.A.F. officer appear in the current issue of "Britain". "The last war I was with the famous Fifty-First Highland Division. I remember well during the terrible defeats of early 1918 how my spirit rose when I heard the sound of the bagpipes in France. Sometimes when all seemed hopeless their music brought hope back. Now I read again of my old division in action, and once more the pipers have played the Scottish soldiers into battle. The tunes are variants of the same—My Native Highland Home, bringing memories of the blue hills of Scotland, hazy in the sun, with the sweep of tawny grass in front of them; or of dark cliffs above the breakers; or of the dun hills and gray fields; or of the sleepy Western Isles, from which many of the best pipers come. Out of all the memories there comes that love of country for which all peoples fight. The Highlanders, known for their hard intellects, are also a people of deep emotion; and to them the pipes declare that a man who can only think, and not feel, is an incomplete man."

No Man Like Him

British Air Marshal Says Churchill Could Not Be Replaced

Leonard Lyons, in the New York Post, says: "It is no longer news that when Churchill came here he was accompanied by a large number of the top-ranking military and naval officers. They all travelled on the same ship. One of the passengers was Air Marshal Sir Charles Portal. A Washington official questioned the advisability of permitting so many important men to travel together. 'That's too dangerous,' said the American. 'If anything happened to that ship, the loss to our cause would have been irreparable.' 'That's not quite true,' replied Portal. 'As far as the rest of us are concerned, any one of us could be replaced. Any one of us, but not Winston Churchill. Not the Prime Minister. Churchill cannot be replaced. He is the war.'"

THE RIGHT STUFF

This, too, is the spirit of victory. Left alone on his farm in Bertie township, near Port Erie, Ont., without any help when his grandson, Howard Reuben Noyes, departed for Toronto to join the R.C.A.P., George F. House, who is 86, will do his farming himself and attempt to raise much-needed crops, as his contribution to the battle against Hitlerism.

DELIVERED THE GOODS

The train required to carry the British First Army's supplies when it landed in North Africa last November would have stretched for 627 miles—625 miles of trucks loaded to capacity with supplies turned out by a gigantic non-stop effort by men and women who, for the most part, had no experience in that type of work.

NAVAL GUN SALUTE

According to Ships Magazine a naval gun salute 400 years ago was indisputable evidence of good will. Real shot was fired, but aimed at the sea. Since the guns could not be re-loaded and retired in much less than a half hour, the splashes following a broadside salute were proof that the ship could not fire again for a while.

POST-WAR PLANS

Many cities in Great Britain among them Birmingham, Coventry, York and London, are already planning for post-war buildings. "Planning" is the right word, for no longer are builders allowed to build haphazardly. The re-building of the cities is being controlled, and York, for example, is trying to determine in advance whether to plan for a population of 50,000, 100,000 or 150,000.

CHAPTER XI

TOGETHER Morgan and Roaiza slipped out of the warehouse shadows. Hardly had they placed themselves on the opposite side of the automobile when they heard approaching footsteps and then the striking of a match as another cigarette was lighted. Morgan, lifting himself on tiptoe, saw the dim figure of Roaiza pause beside the runabout of the car. The American glided around and touched his pistol to Roaiza's side.

"Arriba, Captain," he said softly.

Roaiza whirled, blinking in his surprise. "Morgan," he exclaimed.

"Not so loud, senior," cautioned Morgan. "We want a word with you."

"You are under arrest, Morgan. Put that gun away." Roaiza made no effort to raise his hands.

"Roaiza, you are hunting the wrong people. Listen—"

The captain stepped back quickly and his hand flew toward the holster where a revolver belted about his waist. "Sanchez! Pedro!" Roaiza's voice rang out into the night with the carrying qualities of a struck gong.

"Hurry! Morgan is here—"

Morgan's arm rose and fell crashing the butt of the automatic down on Roaiza's head. He crowded the falling figure against the car and Velasquez ran to the ground. "Roaiza!" he cried. "Start the car and get out of here! Before the police come tumbling out of that building!"

The girl darted forward to jerk open the car door. Morgan gathered Roaiza in his arms; the turning starter whirled the motor into life and Morgan, throwing himself with the unconscious captain into the rear seat, heard gears clash; the car jolted into motion with an abruptness that piled Morgan and his burden into a heap on the cushions.

POSITA gripped the steering wheel more tightly and the crescendo of the motor increased as her foot flatted the accelerator against the floorboard. The police who blocked the exit jumped hastily to avoid the hurtling vehicle.

"Keep going, seniorita!" Morgan called. "They'll be after us as soon as they can round up another car."

There was no need to halt for Morgan to take the wheel. Roaiza Velasquez was handling the speeding car with all the dexterity Morgan himself could have commanded, and her superior knowledge of the streets enabled them to keep up the pace and quickly put the city behind them.

In his corner of the tonneau Roaiza straightened, groaned under his breath and fingered the bump on his head. He eyed Morgan, the girl, the gun resting on Morgan's knee, then gazed at the night-dimmed country, side blurring past the window of the car.

"Are you mad, Senior Morgan?" he heard. "This is kidnapping."

"You force us to take these desperate measures, captain. We want to prove to you that you should be on our side instead of Guillermo's. Guillermo is the spy whose activities brought me to Buenos Aires. It was he who ordered Velasquez and Diaz killed."

"I hope you speak the truth, senior," Roaiza said. "I would like to believe that the confidence and cooperation we showed one another was not misplaced on my part."

Roaiza turned the car off the highway, entering an empty lane that threaded through a grove of trees. Where the growth was thickest, the girl applied the brakes, and in that secluded spot Captain Morgan revealed the details of the tangle that had commenced when the American had first observed the faintly amuffled surface of what should have been an immaculate and sparkling glass.

CAPTAIN ROJAS heard him through, and was silent for a long moment. That is a rather fantastic tale, Senior Morgan," he said at length. "I regret that I cannot accept it."

"Why not?" Morgan asked anxiously. His hopes had been built up by Roja's receptive attention. "We have no proof yet, I am aware. But if you will believe that I do not lie, we can work together to prove a thing we know to be true."

Rojas shook his head and smiled drily. "Let me point out the error in your alibi, Morgan. According to your own story, Guillermo became suspicious when you asked me to see that Verde did not leave the Casa Grande, Guillermo now claims, told De Nova to find Diaz, the fingerprint man, and investigate." The captain paused. "I give you a final chance, senior. How did Guillermo convey such a message to De Nova?"

Morgan frowned, endeavoring to anticipate Roja's objection. That should not have been difficult. They were both in the same building, the hotel.

"Must I continue to explain?" Rojas murmured wearily. "If you will remember, Lieutenant, it was just after we had searched your room on the fifth floor, when Don Felix and I were entering the elevator, that you asked me to locate and keep an eye on the missing Senior Verde, the man whom you now claimed killed Col. Velasquez."

"Yes," Morgan nodded, still puzzled. "I have already told you all that, and I see nothing I may have said that should cause such doubts to enter your mind."

"That is where your whole story falls down. After you left us at the elevator, I was with Don Felix every minute of the time from then until Guillermo had no chance to talk to De Nova. We did not even descend the ground floor where De Nova probably was. We left the elevator at the fourth floor because I wanted another look at the captain's room. Then I accepted Guillermo's invitation to wait in his room until Diaz returned with the fingerprints we were expecting. Don Felix and I were together when the news came that Diaz had been shot."

FOR a space Morgan was non-plussed. "The fact that a telephone in Guillermo's room," he hazarded. "He could have called the desk and communicated with De Nova."

Rojas shook his head. "Don Felix did not touch the phone. We did not even discuss the matter of Velasquez. Guillermo is a cultivated gentleman. We talked of books, plays and music. He asked if I would like to hear the violin, and I suggested that he play my favorite O Sole Mio. I shall never forget the exquisite music the gifted Don Felix played for me."

Morgan, too, through the opened window of his room on the fifth floor above, had often heard the music of Guillermo. The bespectacled man was indeed a wizard with bow and string.

"The game is up, Morgan," said Roja. "Give me that gun and we shall return to the city. You killed Velasquez and Diaz. No other conclusion is left me, a thing I regret exceedingly. My sympathies are with America in this war and I was quite eager to help you stamp out German espionage in Buenos Aires. But you were loyal to the Casa Grande not to wait for spies but to obtain our military secrets from Col. Velasquez."

"That Miguel was no traitor!" "Permit me to contradict you, seniorita. Roja's hand reached for his head politely. "Col. Velasquez' missing papers were found on Esteban, your brother, when we were arrested at the warehouse. . . . Well, Lt. Morgan, do you surrender?"

"Surrender?" No! Morgan's voice took on sudden vehemence. "Roaiza—when you and Esteban took me out of the Casa Grande how did you manage it unobserved?"

"There is a service elevator," the girl explained. "Used to move baggage, laundry and supplies from the different floors. The elevator was not in use at that hour of the day and no one saw us when we took you down."

"And the time is only a little later now," he added. "To you think we could get into the hotel by the same method?"

"We might," Roaiza replied doubtfully. "The elevator will be idle, I know. But the door at the rear platform will be locked."

MORGAN grinned and produced the keys from his pocket. "I can open any door in the Casa Grande. Think of it, Roja! Roja! OK, seniorita, back to town. I've not had an idea. If we can sneak into the hotel, there is a long way to go. We can put the skids under Guillermo."

The girl glanced doubtfully toward the policeman. "But Capt. Rojas," "I shall handle Roja," Morgan said drily. "Wait until I have a look into the rumble seat."

Roaiza took the automatic while Morgan left the car and opened the baggage compartment. He found a section of rope long enough to bind the arms of Roja securely.

Rojas made no physical protest as his hands were tied behind his back. "I shall not forget this indignity, senior," he promised darkly.

"Sorry, captain," Morgan apologized. "But I cannot trust you not to create a disturbance when we return to Buenos Aires, or while we are in the hotel." The knots tightened,

Reclaimed From Sea

United States Army Engineers Have Created Air Field At Bermuda

Many remarkable achievements have been made in the reclamation of lands from marshes, rivers and the sea, and one of the most interesting of the present war is the airfield created by United States Army Engineers at Bermuda.

Named for one of its planners, Kindley airfield adjoins Fort Bell, one of the defences of the island, and it was literally built up from the bottom of the sea. Where 18 months ago there was just clear water of Bermuda, there is now one of the most up-to-date airfields that air services could wish for. Millions of cubic yards of fill were dumped into the area by dredgers until there was sufficient top surface on which to lay out runways and erect buildings that by any modern standard would be called impressive.

Fort Bell has undergone extensive modernization at the hands of the Americans who held the land on a 99 years' lease from Britain. One of the roads is to be named Andrews in memory of General Frank M. Andrews who was killed not long ago in an air crash in Iceland, and another is to be Fox road in memory of the owner of the land who had refused fabulous offers from wealthy Americans who wished to build homes there. But he gave up his palatial home and the land as a contribution to winning the war, saying that if it was the King's wish he would be glad to do so. His death soon after was attributed to a broken heart.—St. Thomas Times-Journal.

NUMBER ONE TRAVELLER

King George is Britain's number one traveller. He has covered 36,000 miles in his royal train since the outbreak of the war, and all his journeys have been both necessary and helpful to the morale of the British citizens with whom he has shared joys and sorrows through good times and had, moving freely about the country.—Financial Post.

A WEEKLY EDITOR LOOKS AT Ottawa

Written specially for the weekly newspapers of Canada

By JIM GREENBLAT

In the House of Commons the other day, attending, on behalf of weeklies, a press conference for General Henri Girouard. A memorable experience for me. The General spoke for 50 minutes, without notes. Tall, wearing a plain khaki field uniform without decorations of any kind, he looked every inch the famous soldier, who in two wars has escaped from German prisons. His chiselled, granite jaw sets up an interesting face, close to a double for the late Lord Kitchener. He talks in slow, measured tones, without gesticulation, at times arms folded. He has piercing eyes which seem to take everything in without moving. While speaking, his face, stern, is in complete repose. Only twice did he appear animated; once when talking about the road from "Tunis to Berlin"; and again later in the question period when asked what effect recognition would have for the National Liberation Committee. His face lit up, he smiled broadly, saying if that was a political question, he knew nothing about politics. He was introduced to the press conference by Prime Minister King.

Questioned in the House why the discount on Canadian funds as against U.S. dollars, finance Minister Isley stated that stability is much more important at the present time. Any change in final exchange rates, he declared, would cause a vast amount of dislocation, some would benefit, others wouldn't. There would be no national gain by reducing the spread now. For instance if the west exported a lot of grain to the U.S., they would suffer by reason of the changing rates set. It was pointed out that to wash out the exchange rate while competing with countries whose currency is depreciated below ours would be a disadvantage to us.

There was a lump in my throat. Other morning watched national film board crew about scene for a documentary film. Wave after wave of soldiers, airmen, C.W.A.C.'s, Wrens, air-girls marching down the massive, broad steps of the House of Commons toward the cameras: khaki, blue, white, six abreast, arms swinging, proud of themselves and the historic background. Canada's thrilling youth in uniform. You might see your own boy or girl in that film, some place, some day.

To indicate increased demand on Canadian supplies now, the Standard section informs us that sales of women's clothing increased by 98% during first three months of 1943, as against the same period in 1939.

Judicial Sale of Farm Property By Tender.

Pursuant to an order of the Honourable Mr. Justice Tweedie and of certain directions for sale, sealed tenders will be received for the purchase of the North-east quarter of Sec. 4, Twp. 32, Rge. 27, W. 4th Mer., containing mines and minerals, subject to all taxes, rates and assessments imposed thereon subsequent to 31st December, 1942, and subject to the right of the present occupant of the premises to harvest and take off the 1943 crop.

The above land is situated about 5 miles from nearest elevator and post office at Allingham and 2 miles from the nearest school, and contains approximately 160 acres, of which about 90 acres are cultivated. The buildings consist of: frame house, 18' x 36', frame barn 24' x 44' with lean-to 14' x 44, garage and blacksmith shop, and utility building. There is a drilled well on the land, which is fenced and cross-fenced.

The sale will be subject to an upset price of $3,300.00

Tenders must be enclosed in sealed envelope marked "Tender to Holland-Canada Mortgage Company Limited, vs. Axler and Hader, No. S.C.A. 32927" addressed to R. P. Wallace, Clerk of the Supreme Court, Court House, Edmonton, Alberta, and must be in the hands of the said R. P. Wallace not later than 12 o'clock noon on the ninth day of August, 1943.

Terms of Sale: Each tender must be accompanied by a marked cheque or cash for 10% of the amount of the tender, and balance of the purchase price must be paid into Court within 60 days of the acceptance of tender without interest. The deposit of 10% shall be forfeited by the successful tenderer if he refuses to carry out the purchase after the acceptance of his tender. Cheques of the unsuccessful tenderers will be returned to them immediately after rejection thereof, the highest or any tender not necessarily accepted. In other respects the terms and conditions of sale will be the standing conditions of the Supreme Court of Alberta, so far as the same are applicable.

For further particulars apply to T. D. Fitzsimon, Barrister, 718 McCleod Building, Edmonton, Alberta.

Dated at Edmonton, Alberta, this 22nd day of July, 1943.

For Farm Boys

Farming requires a wide variety of skills and a lot of knowledge. The farmer must be a mechanic to get the best out of machinery, a botanist to recognize weeds and mixtures in his crops, a breeder to select the best sires and dams, a nutritionist to fit his stock for the market economically, a pathologist to recognize and control diseases in his crops and livestock, and so on. In addition, he must be a business man and a useful member of his own community.

Our colleges of agriculture have done wonders in training men who wish to devote their lives to research and experimentation; but this is not all. They also provide courses for those intending to farm. These courses do not pretend to teach a boy how to farm, but they do teach him a lot about farm problems that cannot be learned at all, or only with great difficulty elsewhere. In addition to much useful knowledge of crop production, livestock management, and agricultural engineering, the student comes with farm boys from all over his province, and learns something of their problems. He returns to his farm a better farmer and a more useful citizen.

Agricultural training is offered at the School of Agriculture, Olds, Alberta; the University of Saskatchewan, Saskatoon; and the University of Manitoba, Winnipeg. Write to these institutions for information on School of Agriculture courses and short courses in special subjects.

SOLDIER of the SOIL

THIS year the Canadian Farmer urgently needs help. He needs your help to produce the food so necessary for victory. Many thousands of farm workers are serving in the Forces, so that the farmer—the Soldier of the Soil—is short-handed, but short-handed as he is, he is called upon to produce more food than ever before. Food is one of the most powerful weapons of war. Grains, bacon, dairy products, eggs, beef, fruit, vegetables—FOOD to feed our armies, our allies and our people we must have.

WHAT CAN YOU DO?

You may be a school teacher, student, business or professional man, an office or store clerk—no matter what you are, if you have a few hours, days, weeks, or months of free time this summer, you can do your country and the farmer a great and patriotic service by helping out on the farm. You may be inexperienced, but you still can help. You will find work on the farm healthy and congenial. It will give you the satisfaction of feeling that you have brought Victory nearer.

What you should do NOW!

Consult any special local committee or office established to deal with farm labour placements in your city or town, or Write the Director of the Dominion-Provincial Farm Labour Program at the Capital of your province; or Get in touch with your nearest Employment and Selective Service Office.

The Harvard Is The Advanced Trainer Plane Now Used In Canada's Air Training Scheme

A FLASHING, swift, yellow plane, with wheels folded neatly under its chin can swoop down over any street or country lane in Canada and children will look up from their play to exclaim, "Boy, there goes a Harvard." Now a familiar household word in any part of the country, the name Harvard three years ago was associated in the minds of most only with that of a great educational centre. Now everyone knows the Harvard as the AT-16 advanced trainer plane of Canada's vast air training scheme.

THE HARVARD

Those who know it best of all are the present day heroes of the R.C.A.F. and R.A.F. who learned from it how to twist, turn, and outfly the best of the Axis airmen. Although the plane is not essentially designed as a fighter, it has played a tremendous role in Canada's war effort, and 9,000 Canadians are working day and night to make sure that their brothers of the air forces get the best possible plane to complete their preparations for action.

An all-metal two-seater, low-wing monoplane, the Harvard spreads her wings over a span of 42 feet. Her single 550-horsepower Pratt and Whitney Wasp engine can lift the craft's 5,340 pounds of gross weight swiftly from the ground and send it roaring through the air, obedient to the slightest control, at a speed in excess of 200 miles per hour.

Armament provision for the plane consists of a machine gun in one wing, a camera gun in the other, and a light type practice bomb rack. Full equipment is also provided for night flying and signalling. For the benefit of potential pilots, all controls and instruments are duplicated. Instruments also include the full range required for blind flying, and a hood for blind flying instruction is provided.

Painted a bright yellow which flashes brilliantly in the sunlight, the plane is of metal construction throughout. The front, or cockpit section of the fuselage and the detachable engine mount, are of welded steel construction, covered with detachable metal side panels and cowling. The rear part of the fuselage and the wing, tail, and control surfaces and flaps, are of metal "skinner" built, flaps, are of metal. The exception of the ailerons, rudders, and elevators, which are fabric covered. A special feature of the Canadian-built model is the extensive system of cockpit heating, for cold climate operations.

Produced on a large scale, the Harvard is manufactured in Canada by Norad Aviation Limited under license from North American Aviation Incorporated, of California. In 1937, when there was still two years before the horizon, R.E.C. Norad, Canada's "Flying Dutchman," went to Ottawa to discuss with the R.C.A.F. the need for an advanced trainer. Official action was slow in developing but Norad went ahead on his own and obtained a license from North American to make the Harvard. It wasn't until January 1940, however, that he got his first contract and the trainers began to roll from his shop. The rest of the story of the Harvard is familiar to all Canadians. The government now needed trainers and needed them fast. Canadian workmen produced them fast. The plant of 142 men on January 1, 1939, had grown to an organization of 8,710 persons by January 1, 1943, and the sleek yellow trainers began to sweep over Canadian fields by thousands.

It is not by haphazard choice that the top-flight trainer is painted a brilliant yellow. Study and experience revealed that if a plane is forced down in isolated country it is more easily spotted by searching planes if it is painted a brilliant color which will show up against a background of either snow or foliage.

Gibraltar Key

The work of a tunnelling company of Royal Canadian Engineers, who returned to England recently after several months of work on the Empire's Mediterranean fortress, was recognized when each man in the unit was presented with a "key to the rock" by Lieut.-Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton, G.O.C.-in-C. First Canadian Army.

Polish Girl Enlists

First European Guest Child To Join Women's Army Corps

First European guest child to enlist in the Canadian Women's Army Corps is a Polish girl whose temporary home is "Somewhere in Nova Scotia." Her name cannot be revealed because of the fear of German reprisals after her family in Poland. Ever since the Nazis goose-stepped into her native Poland, in 1939, this young girl has been counting the days until she would be old enough to take an active part in the war, and thus get her own back at the countries that destroyed her home.

On May 15th, her ambitions were realized. She was accepted as a Corps member, and solemnly took the oath of allegiance. Although she has not heard from her family in Poland for some time, she is certain that they would approve of the step she has taken, and she is enthusiastic about the opportunities afforded her to serve not only Canada but her own country, and indirectly her own family in Poland.

This girl came to Canada from Poland late in 1938 to visit with an aunt. During her visit war broke out and her homeland was invaded thus touching off the explosives of a war that has become global in scope. Her parents sent word for her to remain in Canada, and since that time she has longed to be of service to her own country as well as to the adopted Canada. She has fulfilled that longing with her enlistment.

At the present time this young woman is undergoing her basic training at Kitchener, Ont.

Supply Is Short

Farmers Urged To Save Alfalfa And Red Clover Seeds

If the substantial requests in Canada for alfalfa, red clover and alsike seed from the 1943 crops are to be met, it will be necessary for farmers to save and harvest as much seed of these crops this year as possible, states Nelson Young, Seeds Administrator. Any seed harvested which will be surplus to the farmer's own requirements should be sold through the usual commercial channels and the prices should assure a fair return. At present such seeds are retailing at the retail ceiling prices, said Mr. Young.

In helping to overcome the shortage of protein feeds this year alfalfa, red clover and alsike which are high in protein especially, if cut early should be more than ever relied upon. While those engaged in dairying will need to conserve as much of the forage crops as possible, the Seeds Administrator believes that they may find they may be able to meet their food requirements and still save a part of the crop for seed. If they can do this, they will help out the seed requirements of those countries of the Allied Nations which expect to be in short supply.

Why is it the average person can distinctly hear a clock tick across the room, yet can't hear the radio from a distance of eight feet if it isn't turned up to a hog-calling volume?

North Impresses Business Leaders

Fulfilling a lifelong ambition to see Canada's northland, W. M. Neal, vice-president of the Canadian Pacific Railway, and Canadian Pacific Air Lines, Montreal, accompanied by W. A. Mather, Winnipeg, vice-president of western lines, and a party of leading business men, made a 7,000-mile air, rail and motor tour of the hinterland beyond Edmonton. Travelling down the Mackenzie River route to Alkavik, on the Arctic Coast, by Canadian Pacific Air Lines, the party also inspected the scene of important oil developments at Norman Wells, on the Mackenzie, far said developments at Fort McMurray, radium deposits on Great Bear lake, and returned from Fort McMurray to Edmonton by North Alberta Railways. Mr. Neal and his companions then flew from Edmonton to Whitehorse over the line of the Alaska Highway and motored back to Dawson Creek on the new highway, completing the round trip from Dawson Creek to Edmonton by Northern Alberta Railways. Impressed by what they saw everywhere in the northland, Mr. Neal and his party said the whole country is being "miraculously transformed" under the impetus of global warfare,

New Type Of Emergency Kit For The Protection Of Airmen Who Are Forced Down At Sea

TO give airmen every chance for survival wherever and whenever they may be forced down—on land, at sea or in mid-winter—the R.C.A.F. has adopted five new types of emergency equipment, air force headquarters said in a press release. The equipment includes an emergency ration kit which all fliers must wear while in the air, a supplementary ration kit to be carried in aircraft, an emergency kit for winter flying, a dinghy kit of supplies for forced landings at sea and a tiny emergency radio to send SOS messages.

The personal emergency kit being distributed now to all flying personnel, is worn like a bandolier around the waist. Packed, it is only an inch thick, and contains gum, eight chocolate bars and two packages of specially-prepared biscuits.

The rations provide sufficient food for three days under normal working conditions.

The kit includes matches, fishing lines, a heliograph mirror to signal aircraft from the ground, a medical kit, smoke generators, whistle, knife, compass and chemical "heat tablets," which generate flame for starting fires.

The supplementary kit carried in each plane contains twice the quantity of medical aids in the individual kit, plus bandages and enough chocolate and biscuits to keep one man alive for 28 days or four men for a week. It includes tinned water, hand axe, compass, smoke generator, heliograph mirror, "nest" of cooking pots, folding cooking stove using solidified alcohol, four spoons, cigarette papers, tobacco, fly repellent and heavy cord which can be used as rope or fishing line.

A winter kit is in production for cold weather flying. Individually parcelled for each airman landing in a winter wilderness will be heavy woollen socks, ski-type mitts, "mukluk" moccasins with felt insoles, anti-glare eye shields, snowshoes and a sleeping bag.

In the bottom of the valise containing the inflatable rubber dinghy will be a kit for airmen forced down on water. It will contain a water proof cover to keep off waves and rain, two marine distress signals—to be replaced later by a small Verry pistol and 30 signal cartridges—and signalling matches which burn with a bright greenish light.

The kit also will include yellow skull caps to make the crew conspicuous; rubber leak stoppers in case enemy airmen machine gun the dinghy; glove-type paddles, a drinking cup, graduated to ration water, a telescopic mast with a signal flag (the mast can also be used as a radio aerial), more emergency rations, canned water, fluorescent sea markers and a small first-aid kit.

A small emergency radio, to be transferred to the dinghy in case of "downing" will be carried in aircraft. It will operate on the international distress frequency of 500 kilocycles and transmit either an automatic SOS or Morse code messages.

Occupation Force

Germany Is Keeping Half Million Troops In Tiny Luxembourg

Prince Felix of Luxembourg, whose wife, the Grand Duchess, has been of late in Canada, was the guest of honor the other night in London at a reception organized by the Luxembourg Society. He is a colonel in the army of his little principality now overrun by Hitler's hordes. He says that almost the whole of Luxembourg's population has been driven away to Germany to work in the war factories there. The area of the country is only 1,000 square miles, and the population 300,000, but the Nazis have an occupation force of half a million troops. Prince Felix is now attached to the British army, north-eastern command. His eldest son, John, the Hereditary Grand Duke of Luxembourg, is a private in the Irish Guards. He was educated in England.

Didsbury Flier Again Lucky

PO Goldwyn Gabel's plane hit 4 times in 20 flights.

Canadians flew their Halifax and Wellington bombers into the Ruhr Sunday night through skies pierced by thousands of lights but considerably lighter anti-aircraft fire than experience had taught them to expect over that much-battered industrial area of Germany.

Several squadrons from the R.C.A.F. bomber group took part in the heavy raid on Essen on Sunday, and hundreds of other Canadians made the trip in R.A.F. crews.

It was a narrow brush for at least one Canadian plane. PO Goldwyn Gabel of Didsbury, kept his bomber over the target with one engine afire and the rear turret smashed.

Gabel's crew was unable to put out the fire and when the aircraft began to vibrate dangerously, Gabel was about to order his men to bail out into the flaming target area below. Just then the propeller and reduction gear fell from the engine. The vibration ceased and the fire died. Gabel brought his plane home safely.

This was the fourth time Gabel had been hit by enemy fighter fire in about a score of operations.

In 1910 they homesteaded in the Three Hills district, living on the farm until they retired in 1925 to the town of Three Hills, where they resided until last August, when they came to reside with their daughter, Mrs. Wollen, west of Didsbury.
